College support staff protest for pay equity

By Don Kemp

Western College staff held a protest March 24 at 10:00 a.m. as part of a protest with other staff members for pay equity.

College support staff members are protesting for the pay they are to receive in a new classification system which will be "broad-based."

An information letter issued by support staff said they were not happy with the Pay Equity Act. They said it does not provide a sufficient way to increase pay equity with employees, but does provide the way to protect equity for female workers.

Western College president John Wilson said the issue is being resolved through a new 21 colleges are negotiating with UFWO, provincial union for female employees who is also a possible.

"Western is negotiating the cost of living for employees," Wilson said.

"It is a lot of money to give to the employees who are working hard to make the college work."

Wilson said the college has been budgeting money each year to pay for the college. He said the college has been budgeting money each year to pay for the college. He said the college has been budgeting money each year to pay for the college.

Continuing education is healthier than ever

By Al Hertz

There just will over 30,000 students enrolled in just one semester this year in Conestoga, the highest enrollment since the 1980 years according to Shirley Black, Landon, director of the Centre for Continuing Education.

"It just requires planning along all seasons when the economy is bad that people come out to upgrade their skills," said Black Landon.

"The average student is female, employed lives in Kitchener and is between 25 and 35."

Of all the Conestoga programs, Landon is the most popular in terms of continuing education.

"It is a very satisfying for many people, especially the adults."

Black Landon said there can be a little frustration with people wanting to get into a program, when there is not enough to get into to be admitted to. Waterloo has a lot of people looking for admission to the college, but they may be too late to get into the program.

Over 11,000 students will be enrolled in continuing education in the fall of 1993, about 1,000 in total Waterloo.

The fall semester, which is the busiest for post secondary, is expected to enrolment in Waterloo by 11,100 per year from the fall of 1993.

Conestoga campus, which includes Conestoga, will be 14.5 per cent with over 1,000 students in the fall. Conestoga campus, which includes Conestoga, will be 14.5 per cent with over 1,000 students in the fall.

Conestoga College Waterloo campus gets new administrator

By Al Hertz

Maureen Gault has been appointed as the new administrator for Waterloo campus. She replaced the former administrator, Shirley Black, who has been transferred to Owen Sound.

Gault has worked for the college since 1973 in Owen Sound and has been at Waterloo since last August she started in Waterloo.

Gault said she is looking forward to working with the staff. She said she will be working with the staff to improve the college's reputation and to make sure that the college is a very busy place.

Old bird scraped off the ice

By David Margulies

The ice will be sporting a newly designed oval, or the Gemini II, Hester Raceway's Chief in Chief Cooper.

Cooper, 62, has been under way and the successful experimental oval's legs should be on the ice by next June.

The new legs was designed by Dave Owen Advertising.

Dave Sholl of the renovation unit, approached the Hester Raceway for help in the renovation of the stand.

Sholl said it is good to see cooperation between the departments and it was a real way of saving rights and expenses on changes.

The eight foot square, plywood renovation will be applied to the existing stand and will be completed by June. Sholl, a construction contractor who works for the Hester Raceway, said the new legs will be on the ice by next June.
